Good Investment

IN THESE changing days there is no absolute security for anyone. All values are changing and no one knows what a dollar will buy in 1950 or 1960. The foremost asset of every man today is earning power which, in turn, is based on character, health, energy and knowledge of his business.

If he retains these, the chances are fairly good that he will be able to make a living under any conditions, provided he has friends. Cultivation of friends is one of the best investments any man can make.

When the scale of competition is in delicate balance, friendship and good-will decide where the order will go. Corporations need friends and so do individuals.
